

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

Nowadays domestic violence is growing in our country, and this means that people who are married might break up and be divorced. The male gender population drinks more alcohol than before the beginning of the crisis. Moreover, they take drugs and they have more problems than before, for this reason this population uses violence against their wives and their partners. This problem in our society is badly harming our children and teenagers, who are more violent than their parents. Currently young people use their free time to imitate their parent's behavior and play with violent games.

Solving the problem is going to be really difficult. However, we should change our habits and our laws to eradicate the present situation. On the contrary, we are going to experience more and more violent cases in spite of the fact that we may get over the crisis.
